A Windows system tray notification window. It features a blue background with a white border. At the top left is a hamburger menu icon, and at the top right are minus, maximize, and close window control icons. The main content includes a large number '1' next to a game controller icon, followed by a battery icon with a green bar. To the right of the battery icon, the text reads 'wireless FULL 1d 21h 05m'. Below this, there is a smaller number '2' next to a game controller icon, and two more game controller icons to its right.

So far, this is pretty nice. It tells you just about how much battery you have left in your Xbox controller and it can actually save you from damaging your batteries as if you are like I am, you tend to constantly charge a good battery and that causes wear and tear on the life of the battery.

For a simple dollar or two, I would highly suggest this if you go wireless.

Also as a tip, if your wireless controller doesn't turn on - put an OLD toothbrush into a cup of either a soda like Pepsi or Coke and get the toothbrush bristles wet Then rub the bristles on the metal connectors of the Xbox controller and battery pack connectors from within.

This works nicely for me. If you don't have any free or even flat soda laying around, Vinegar works nicely as well as the batteries tend to leak some Base battery conduction fluid and the acidity from Soda or Vinegar will eat it right off with mild scrubbing.

Just don't soak the controller, that would ruin it but just rub the metal connectors and it will work almost immediately, once you put the batteries back in.. Is it possible to run this app without Steam?

The app is great! Works with all of my 3 controllers connected at the same time. However, it would be nice if it worked without launching Steam every time.. Once I launch this the only way to stop it is by killing the steam processor. I can't find the actual processor for this software and I can't turn it off any other way and it also overrides any game I'm currently playing which is very annoying
